Holding a package at a location

How does FedEx Hold at Location work?

I requested my package to be held for pickup at a FedEx location.

When your package is delivered to the FedEx location, you'll be notified that the package is ready for pickup. You'll receive a text, automated phone call, or email. Your notification type will depend on whether your phone number was added to the shipping label and/or if you're using the FedEx Delivery Manager® app.

Bring a government-issued photo ID.

- If your name doesn't match the name on the package label, you'll need the tracking number.
- If the address on your ID doesn't match the address on the package label, you'll also need to bring an alternative form of ID. You can use a utility bill or statement, health or auto insurance card, property statement from a county or city website, or credit card statement.

I'm picking up a missed delivery.

- FedEx will hold your package for up to 7 days for before it's returned to the shipper.
- You'll need to bring your tracking number, government-issued photo ID, and your door tag number.
- To learn where your package is being held, you'll need to track your package.

What's the difference between a hold for pickup at a location and redirecting a package to be held at a location?

The difference is the timing of the request.

- A request for FedEx® Hold for Pickup is made prior to the package being shipped. In other words, you intended for the package to be delivered to a FedEx location and held for pickup from the start of the shipment process.
- A request to redirect a package to be held at a location for pickup is made after the package has been shipped. This means we'll try to deliver the package to the FedEx location you indicate in your request to redirect it instead of the original delivery address.

In both instances, we'll happily hold your package for pickup at your convenience for up to 7 days.

What is FedEx® Hold for Pickup?

FedEx Hold for Pickup allows you to request packages to be held at a FedEx location. Once redirected, you can pick up packages on your schedule at locations that are convenient to where you work or live.

What is the deadline for using FedEx Hold for Pickup?

Requests made prior to midnight the day before scheduled delivery should be available for pickup the next day.

Picking up a package

What do I need to bring to pick up a package at FedEx?

You'll need a government-issued photo ID. If your ID address doesn't match the package label address, you'll also need your tracking number and an alternative form of ID. You can use a utility bill or statement, health or auto insurance card, property statement from a county or city website, or credit card statement.

When can I pick up packages from FedEx?

You should get a text, automated call, or email notifying you that your package is ready for pickup. You can pick up your package any time after that during normal business hours. Hours vary from location to location. Check the hours of FedEx locations near you.

Where do I pick up my FedEx delivery?

If you requested your package to be held for pickup and we were able to meet the request, go to the location you selected. If you're not sure which location you chose, call Customer Service at 1.800.GoFedEx 1.800.463.3339. If it's a missed delivery, you'll need to track your package.

How long will a location hold my package for pickup?

FedEx will hold your package for up to 7 days. After that, we'll return it to the shipper.

How do I pick up a FedEx package early?

Although your package may be at a local facility, it won't be available for pickup until processed. FedEx will attempt to contact you by phone or email once it's processed and ready for pickup.

If you've been notified by FedEx that your package is ready for pickup, you'll need the tracking number or door tag and a government-issued photo ID that includes the recipient's address.

Packages that are redirected to a FedEx location after they were shipped are usually available on the original delivery date. Rarely, additional time may be needed to get the package to the new location, depending on when the redirect request was made.

Who can pick up my FedEx package?

Anyone who lives at the same address as you can pick up your package. They'll need the tracking number and a government-issued photo ID that proves they live at the same address as the one on the package label. They can also use an alternative ID to prove they live with you. They can bring a utility bill or statement, health or auto insurance card, property statement from a county or city website, or credit card statement with them as proof.

If you use FedEx Delivery Manager to request to redirect your package, you'll receive a QR code. You can share that code with someone, and they can use it to pick up your package for you, as long as it doesn't require an adult signature.

Why was my package taken to a FedEx location for customer pickup?

If a delivery requires a signature or if the package can't be left at your home, we may deliver your package to a nearby secure location for pickup, such as your local FedEx Office or Walgreens store. With extended business hours, you can stop by the location listed on your door tag to pick up your package on your schedule, as early as the same day.

Picking up a missed delivery

How do I pick up a missed FedEx delivery?

First, you'll need to find where your package is being held. Track your package.

You can also track your package:

- Through the app by downloading the FedEx® Mobile app and scanning the barcode on your door tag. You will get specific information about your missed shipment and your available delivery options.
- By texting “follow” and your door tag number to 48773 (ex: follow DT999999999999).

If you need more help, call 1.800.GoFedEx 1.800.463.3339 and say “track my package,” then follow the prompts..

On the back of your door tag, you may also have the option to fill out a form and leave it with your signature, authorizing a next-business-day redelivery.

Bring the door tag or tracking number and a government-issued photo ID to your pickup location. Give them to the team member and sign for your package.

If the address on your government-issued photo ID doesn't match the address on the package label, make sure to bring an alternative ID with a matching address. You can use a utility bill or statement, health or auto insurance card, property statement from a county or city website, or credit card statement.

General FedEx questions

What does “last pickup” mean?

The last pickup is the last time packages are picked up from a FedEx location or drop box on a particular day. If you bring your package in or drop it off after the last pickup time, it will ship the next business day.

Why are certain delivery options unavailable to me?

Certain options may not apply to specific deliveries. For example, some shippers may restrict certain delivery options. Or they may not allow recipients to change the destination once the shipment is in transit. FedEx Delivery Manager will allow recipients to select only eligible delivery options.
